Junkers K-47/A-48

The Junkers K 47 designed by Dipl-Ing Karl Plauth and Hermann Pohlmann was intended primarily as a two-seat fighter monoplane, but following the standard Junkers practice of the period, an ostensibly civil counterpart was evolved in parallel as the A 48. Work on the K 47 was begun in 1927, and in order to overcome the restrictions imposed on the development of combat aircraft in Germany appertaining at that time, the prototype was assembled in Sweden by the Junkers subsidiary, A.B Flygindustri at Limhamn-Malmö, although on 1 November 1927.
