

Chapter I ..The Green Dragon.

Tezu's airfield is in one of the most remote areas of India and very near the Chinese frontier. It was built by the British Governor, Sir Arthur McBashten, who moved six R.A.F fighters to the area to fight the illegal traffic of Marijuana from the Yellow Country and stop Japanese spies.

Max knew that this area was full of trouble specially near the Chinese border and wondered why such an urgent message had been sent by the governor to him three days ago. He had also sent a fair amount to pay for his flight plus a bonus for himself.

He landed by the light of oil drums burning wicks for it was past eight pm when the wheels of his plane touched ground. Electricity in 1939 was not a commodity in most of India and less in this desolate place. The RAF mechanics were waiting for him and as soon as he landed a follow-me car got in front of his plane and took him to his parking section which was in the best hangar of the field.

"Captain Rex, welcome sir" said a Sargent as Max deplaned.

"Thank you, are you to take me to Sir Arthur" asked Max smiling at the short Indian soldier.

"yes sir, I have his car right here waiting to drive you to the Governor's Mansion right away, sir" answered the soldier perfectly straight.

Soon Max found himself being driven to his friend and governor of the bordering state quite fast. Twenty minutes later the car went up a small hill and in the top of it stood the magnificent mansion of the governor, a reproduction of many more all around India.

"Welcome sir, said a butler as Max opened the car door.

"The Governor is upstairs waiting for you sir, I will take your suitcase to your room but first follow me sir". said the tall skinny Indian filled by the khaki uniform of a Sargent major.

They went up a flight of stair that took them to the third floor of the mansion, to the special operations room set up for all the state plannings.

as the butler opened the door a tall bowled man of some fifty years or so walked toward Max saying.

"My dear Captain am so glad you have arrived safe and sound, I was somewhat worried due to the incoming rain which promises to be a crude one" said the Governor shaking Max's hand.

Within the hour of his arrival Max the governor and his wife had dinner and after sat in the main room zipping their Cognac and coffee. The governor's wife begged goodnight and left them alone, an army wife knows when to make her exit.

"I am afraid Captain that what I am about to tell you and the reason of the army summing you for your services is of strict secrecy and you must agree to keep it so" said the man looking at Max with a very worried face.

"Yes sir, you and the army can be sure my mouth will be sealed and only my mind will discuss whatever I hear from you" answered Max taking a drink from his glass.

" Have you heard of the Green Dragon" asked the general.

"No, am afraid not sir".

As you know the Japanese are all over China and have set up bases all around the main cities.

But very few know about this green dragon for it is the biggest secret the Japs have about their goings in the country.- "The Green Dragon" captain is the Japanese code name for their Fission bomb, a bomb that has not yet been made but that they have constructed the plant to do it and it is somewhere in China.!!!-- We want you to find it so we together with Chang Kai Chek's forces can bomb it and destroy it completely." continued the general with a very grave face.

" If the Japanese make this bomb you can be sure we will be in dire peril and they will conquer the orient in no time including all the Pacific islands and Australia not to mention India" finished off the governor gulping down all his glass of liqueur.

" A deposit of fifty thousand pounds has been placed in your account at your bank in London and the other twenty five thousand will be delivered to same upon your successful adventure" smiled the man looking at Max.

"I knew something was really bad the moment you had me come to this forsaken place, nothing good can happen around here" said Max finishing his coffee

"Once you give me the details I'll start the journey, you can be sure I will find the place and those Japs will be very surprised that their green dragon fizzles like a wet firecracker, and thank you for the deposit General." finished off Max.

Chapter II.....THE FLIGHTS START!!

Next day Max was introduced to Major Erell McMurtho of British Intelligence.

"Captain, this is a map one of our Chinese spies delivered to us three months ago. You will notice the Japs have outlined two areas. General Mitake-Mura is in charge of the Western "advance Okapi" or western secret territory One and General Aguro-Kanga's Eastern area. These are the two very suspect areas where they could be setting up the "Fission Factories" as we call them. You should study these and then fly to the areas where you think they are at." said the Major handing Max the map with the legends.

The following legends have been found around the map:

ロッドとベース32Aが---ポイント青に位置しますが、についての私達に心配するそこに
気晴らし何もありません... 敵は、これはそれであると思うかもしれないので、すべての

ベースの上にガードを持っています。....

ポイント赤---テスト用の大爆発のために最高の場所...

"Happily I can read Japanese fairly well" said Max looking carefully at the map.

"This will indeed be very useful for my flight planning Major".

"Yes I do believe that in one of those areas there are crude airfields which you could use to land and check the areas around them" answered the Major.

It was with this information that Max traced a BASIC ROUTE which pointed over the mountains. He would have to keep a keen eye for the Japs most probably had camouflaged the installations.

Major MacMurtho finished his presentation saying.

"We took THESE NOTES from a Jap plane that crashed in Chu-How one week ago, I hope you can translate them for no one here knows Japanese but an Indian who says he understands little says that they must be very important to this matter":

Max took the note handed to him and read:

重慶の街に行く

その上に飛ぶ

328度に行く

235海里

"Bingo"!shouted Max and a sardonic smile filled his face, "with this paper I can now start to look for the forsaken base or whatever these Japs have concocted in suffering China...It will be "pay day" for the invaders" said Max to the major who was startled at Max's reaction. He went on.

"This will be a trickle, we will destroy their "Green Dragon" even before it is born!! but I am sure someday China will pay back the Japanese for their invasion and Holocaust they have caused this nation--that payback will doom the island pirates for ever". With those last words Max turned to the major saying" Thank you sir, now I must get ready for my flight tomorrow .

"Oh, Captain, I might add sir" said the major, "we have a captured a Japanese plane which we believe you should take instead of your own, it will help you distract their anti-aircraft batteries as well as other forces in the area".

Max smiled at the Major saying " you sure had all this figured out, good show, I'll take the Jap plane" and walked out to test it.....

NO DAY OFF FOR MAX REX!!!! HE JUST TOOK OFF!!!!
